Mums dress -

And here am I - getting beautified - & all done up in mokes cow turban with a little white cotton showing around the edges - oh most beautiful.

But outside it's spring. Well, it's not exactly, at least mostly - & people are again getting spring fever. For it hasn't got me - probably because there was a ring around the moon last night - & by Grandpa's standards that means storm, eh? However it is warm & nice out now - if a bit slushy.

The concert last night was good - I didn't sing of course, but went as audience. But the Harvard men! Well, almost hopeless - as a group, that is. There were one or two who looked passable - & with evening clothes to help them along, at that. Of course the M. I. T. men have much the edge on Harvard! (That's not true of course - they're all ~~big~~ shiks - especially the Graduate students.) But as a class Harvard is supposed to be a bit more aristocratic & M. I. T. more sociable.

Perhaps Brent, young as he is, will be an entrée into Harvard. Might I also add that the lad is concited? As I think the dinner date may be interesting, though I suspect I won't be sufficiently intrigued to be too enthusiastic!

Trying to think of exciting news, & there just isn't any - heard a fragment of Billy Batchelder & the surprise for Peter & Pau, but present company didn't appreciate the program, as I never found out whether it actually was skis or not.

The lady next to me looks like an old sheep who got scared into being sheared.

With that parting shot - I vamoose, for the time being - love - enough - for - the weekend
Ginny.
